

Are you caught in the “Vicious Cycle of Complexity”?

- Have you started improvement initiatives, but you are unable to execute them because of all the day-to-day business?
- The more initiatives you are starting, the lower their efficiency?
- Your personnel costs are too high, but you should hire even more people to address the current challenges?
- You have dedicated significant resources to achieve process improvements, but you do not see the targeted results?

Potentially your employees are caught in the “Vicious Cycle of Complexity” and need outside-support in order to prioritise the levers and to reduce the number of initiatives instead of increasing them.